HER AILMENTS ALL GONE NOW

Mrs. Sherman Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lake, Michigan. "About one year ago I suffered with irregularities and a weakness and at times was obliged to stay off my feet. I consulted with my family physician and he finally said he could not understand my case, so I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After I had taken the first bottle I could see that I was getting better. I took several bottles of the Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and I am entirely cured of my ailments. You may publish this letter if you wish."—Mrs. MARY SHERMAN, Route 2, Lake, Mich.

There is one fact women should consider and that is this. Women suffer from irregularities and various forms of weakness. They try this and that doctor, as well as different medicines. Finally they take Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound, and Mrs. Sherman's experience is simply another case showing the merit of this well-known medicine.

If your family physician fails to help you and the same old troubles persist, why isn't it reasonable to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

The Salary of M. P.'s.
The salary of an M. P. is $400 (nominally $2,000) a year, on which he has hitherto paid income tax. As an income this is inadequate. But in the days of anti-waste campaigns both malpractice and house of commons whorl from increasing it. But the law officers of the crown suddenly discovered that an M. P.'s expenses may legitimately be reckoned against his income, so that the poorer of them will now pay no tax at all. A happy issue, relieving the poor M. P., and clearing the government to his grateful heart and throwing no odium on parliament. Ministry, since it seems that this is the ordinary law and always was, although no one suspected it till a few weeks ago.—New Republic.

First Workman:—What sort of a job have you got now?
Second Workman:—Oh, I collect alms on the Putnam bridge between midnight and 1 o'clock in the morning.
First Workman:—Are the people particularly generous there at that hour?
Second Workman:—Yes. They generally give me everything they have on them.—Paris Le Balconnet.

A bad back makes a day's work twice as hard. Backache usually comes from weak kidneys, and if backache, dizziness or urinary disorders are added, don't wait—get help before the kidney disease takes a grip—before dropsy, gravel or Bright's disease sets in. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought new life and new strength to thousands of working men and women. Used and recommended the world over. Ask your neighbor.

An Illinois Case
H. W. Wheeler, 315 W. 3rd St., Dixon, Ill., says: "I had kidney trouble, and to bend over to pick up anything was impossible. I had to pass the kidney secretions two or three times an hour and they were nasty, too. I was advised to get Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's helped me in a few days. During the last year, I haven't had need of a kidney remedy."

Ramsey Milholland

"All right then," Fred settled himself upon the window seat with a pipe, and proceeded, "There's something about her, when she stands there, she stands so straight and knows just what she's up to, and everything, why, there's something about her makes the cold chills go down your spine—I mean my spine, not yours particularly! You sit down—I mean anybody's spine, doggone it!" And as Ramsey increased the manifestations of his suspicions, lifting a tennis racket over the prostrate figure, "Oh, murder," Fred said, resignedly. "All right, we'll change the subject. That fat little Werder cuttle made out a pretty good case for Germany, didn't she?"

It was disposed of himself in an easy chair with his feet upon the table, and presently chuckled. "You remember the time I had the fuss with Wesley Bender, back in the old school days?"

"Yes."

"All the flubdub this Werder girl got off tonight puts me in mind of the way I talked that day. I can remember it as well as anything! Wesley kept yelling that whoever mentioned a lady's name in a public place was a pup, and of course I didn't want to hit him for that; a boy's got a regular instinct for trying to make out he's on the right side in a scrap, and he'll always try to do something, or say something, or he'll get the other boy to say something, to make it look as if the other boy was in the wrong and began the trouble. So I told poor old Wes that my father spoke my mother's name in a public place whenever he wanted to, and I dared him to say my father was a pup. And all so on. A boy's startin' up a scrap, why, half the time he'll drag in his father and mother if there's any chance to do it. He'll fix up some way so he can say, 'Well, that's just the same as if you called my father and mother a fool, or something like that. Then, afterward, he can claim he was scuffling because he had to defend his father and mother, and of course he'll more than half believe it himself."

"Well, you take a government—it's only just some men, the way I see it, and if they're going to start some big trouble like this war, why, of course they'll play just about that same old boy trick, because it's instinct to do it, just the same for a man as it is for a boy—or else the principle's just the same, or something. Well, anyhow, if you want to know who started a scrap and worked it up, you got to forget all the talk there is about it, and all what each side says, and just look at two things: Who was fixed for it first, or thought they were, and who hit first? When you get the answer to those two questions everything's settled about this being 'attacked' business. As near as I can make out, this war began with Germany and Austria's startin' to wipe out two little countries; Austria began shootin' up Serbia, and Germany began shootin' up Belgium. I don't need to notice any more than that, myself—all the girls in the country can debate their heads off, they can't change what happened and they can't excuse it, either."

He was silent, appearing to feel that he had concluded conclusively, and the young gentleman on the window seat, after staring at him for several moments of genuine thoughtfulness, was gracious enough to observe, "Well, old Ram, you may be a little slow in class, but when you think things out with yourself you do show signs of something pretty near like real horse-sense sometimes. Why don't you ever say anything like that to some of your pacifist friends?"

"What do you mean? Who you talkin' about? Whose pacifist friends?"

"See, here!" Fred exclaimed, "You keep sitting just where you are, and don't look at me out of the side of your eye like that—pretendin' you're a had horse. I'm really serious now, and you listen to me. I don't think argy-bargy and debating like that little Prunella Werder's does much harm. She's a right nifty young roly-poly, by the way, though you didn't notice, of course."

"Why didn't I?" Ramsey demanded, sharply. "Why didn't I notice?"

"Oh, nothing. But as I was saying, I don't think that sort of talk does much harm: everybody knows it goes on among the pro-Germans, and it's all hot air, anyhow. But I think Linck's sort of talk does do harm, probably among people that don't know much; and, what's more, I think Dora Yocum's does some, too. Well, you hit Linck in the snoot, so what are you—sit still! My lord! You don't think I'm askin' you to go and hit Dora, do you? I mean: Aren't you ever going to talk to her about it and tell her what's what?"

"Oh, you go to bed!"

"No, I'm in earnest," Fred urged. "Honestly, aren't you ever going to?"

"How could I do anything like that?" Ramsey demanded explosively. "I never see her—to speak to, that is. I probably won't happen to have another talk with her, or anything, all the time we're in college."

"No," Fred admitted, "I suppose not. Of course, if you did, then you would give her quite a talking to, just the way you did the other time, wouldn't you?" But upon that, another resumption of physical violence put an end to the conversation.

CHAPTER XII.

Throughout the term Ramsey's calculation of probabilities against the happening of another interview with Dora seemed to be well founded, but at the beginning of the second "semester," he found her to be a fellow member of a class in biology. More than that, this class had every week a two-hour session in the botanical laboratory, where the structure of plants was studied under microscopic dissection. The students worked in pairs, a special family of plants being assigned to each couple; and the instructor selected the couples with an eye to combinations of the quick with the slow. D. Yocum and R. Milholland (the latter in a strange state of mind and complexion) were given two chairs, but only one desk and one microscope. Their conversation was strictly botanical.

Thenceforth it became the most pressing care of Ramsey's life to prevent his roommate from learning that there was any conversation at all, even botanical. Fortunately, Fred was not taking the biological courses, though he appeared to be taking the sentimental ones with an astonishing thoroughness, and sometimes, to Fred's hilarious delight, Ramsey attempted to turn the tables and rally him upon whatever last affair seemed to be engaging his fancy. The old Victorian and pre-Victorian blague word "petulant" had been revived in Fred's vocabulary, and to others, as "skiff." The lightsome spirit was hourly to be seen, even when university rulings forbade, idly-dallying giddily along the campus paths or the town sidewalks with some new and pretty skirt. And when Ramsey tried to fluster him about such a matter Fred would profess his ardent love for the new lady in shouts and impromptu song. Nothing could be done to him, and Ramsey, utterly unable to defend his own sensibilities in like manner, had always to retire in humiliation. Sometimes he would ponder upon the question thus suggested: Why couldn't he do this sort of thing, since Fred could? But he never discovered a satisfying answer.

Ramsey's watchfulness was so careful (lest he make some impulsive admission in regard to the botanical laboratory, for instance) that Mr. Mitchell's curiosity gradually became almost quiescent but there arrived a day in February when it was piqued into the liveliest activity. It was Sunday, and Fred, dressing with a fastidiousness ever his daily habit, noticed that Ramsey was exhibiting an unusual perplexity about neckties.

"Keep the black one on," Fred said, volunteering a suggestion, as Ramsey, muttering fiercely at a mirror, "It's better taste for church, anyhow. You're going to church, aren't you?"

"Yes. Are you?"

"No. I've got a luncheon engagement."

"Well, you could go to church first, couldn't you? You better; you've got a lot of church absences against you."

"Then one more won't hurt. No church in mine this morning, thank! Oh, by the way, see you at the 'frat house' for dinner."

He went forth, whistling syncopations, and began a brisk trudge into the open country. There was a professor's daughter who also was not going to church that morning and she lived a little more than three miles beyond the outskirts of the town. Unfortunately, as the weather was threatening, all others of her family abandoned the idea of church that day, and Fred found her before a cozy fire, but surrounded by parents, little brothers and big sisters. The professor was talkative; Fred's mind might have been greatly improved, but with a window in range he preferred a melancholy contemplation of the snow, which had begun to fall in quantity. The professor talked until luncheon, throughout luncheon, and was well under way to fill the whole afternoon with talk, when Fred, repenting all the errors of his life, got up to go.

Heartily urged to remain, for there was now something just under a blizzard developing, he said no, he had a great deal of "curriculum work" to get done before tomorrow, and passed from the sound of the professor's hospitable voice and into the storm. He had a tedious struggle against the wind and thickening snow, but finally came in sight of the town, not long before dark. Here the road led down into a depression, and, lifting his head as he began the slight ascent on the other side, Fred was aware of two figures outlined upon the low ridge before him. They were dimmed by the driving snow and their backs were toward him, but he recognized them with perfect assurance. They were Dora Yocum and Ramsey Milholland.

They were walking so slowly that their advance was almost imperceptible, but it could be seen that Dora was talking with great animation, and she was a graceful thing, thus gestulating, in her long, slim fur coat with the white snow frosting her brown fur cap. Ramsey had his hands deep in his overcoat pockets and his manner was wholly that of an audience.

Fred murmured to himself, "What did you say to her? 'Nothin'. I started to, but—' Then he put on a burst of speed and passed them, sweeping off his hat with ostentatious deference, yet hurrying by as if fearful of being thought of as killing if he lingered. He went to the "frat house," found no one downstairs, and established himself in a red leather chair to smoke and ramble merrily by a great fire in the hall.

"Half an hour later Ramsey entered, stamped off the snow, hung up his hat and coat, and sat himself down defiantly in the red leather chair on the other side of the fireplace."

"Well, go on," he said. "Commence!"

"Not at all!" Fred returned, amiably. "Fine spring weather today. Lovely to see all the flowers and the birds as we go strolling by. The little hobnobbs—"

"You look here! That's the only walk I ever took with her in my life. I mean by—by asking her and her saying she would and so forth. That other time just sort of happened, and you know it. Well, the weather wasn't just the best in the world, maybe, but she's an awful conscientious girl and once she makes an engagement—"

"Why, of course," Fred finished for him, "she'd be too plous to break it just on account of a mere little blizzard or anything. Wonder how the weather will be next Sunday?"

"I don't know and I don't care," said Ramsey. "You don't suppose I asked her to go again, do you?"

"Why not?"

"Well, for one thing, you don't suppose I want her to think I'm a perfect fool, do you?"

Fred nuzzed a moment or two, looking at the fire. "What was the lecture?" he asked, mildly.

"What lecture?"

"She seemed to me to be—"

"That wasn't lecturing; she was just—"

"Just what?"

"Well, she thinks war for the United States is coming closer and closer—"

"But it isn't."

"Well, she thinks so, anyhow," said Ramsey, "and she's all broken up about it. Of course she thinks we oughtn't to fight and she's trying to get everybody else she can to keep working against it. She isn't going home again next summer, she's going back to that settlement work in Chicago and work there among those people against our going to war; and here in college she wants to get everybody else can to talk against it, and—"

"What did you say?" Fred asked, and himself supplied the reply: "Nothin'. I started to, but—"

Ramsey got up. "Now look here! You know the 'frat' passed a rule that if we broke any more furniture in this house with our scrapping we'd both be fined the cost of repairs and five dollars apiece. Well, I can afford five dollars this month better than you can, and—"

"I take it back!" Fred interposed, hastily. "But you just listen to me; you look out—letting her think you're on her side like that."

"I don't—"

"You don't?"

Do Not Reach for the Moon.
Psychological science apparently has exploded the good old notion that "babies will reach for the moon." Dr. John B. Watson states in the Scientific Monthly that when actually put to the test they will watch attentively anything they see moving, no matter what its distance, but that they will not reach for it until it is within 20 inches of them.

A TRUE RAT STORY

Auburntown, Tenn., Jan. 25, 1922.
STANTON Electric Co.,
Chicago, Ill.
Dear Sirs:
Mr. Robert T. Donnell of Auburntown, Tenn., came in our store the other day and wanted something to kill rats, so I sold him a box Stearns' Rat Paste. And he put some paste on his wall that night and the next morning he found forty-four big rats. And the second night he put out four more blouses with paste on them, and the second morning he found seventeen more rats, making a total of sixty-one rats in two nights, and there were lots more that he did not find. This is some big rat tale, but, nevertheless, it is true. I thought I would write to let you know that your rat paste is good.
Respectfully yours,
KENNEDY BROTHERS.

"The Why of Prayer" was the subject last Sunday morning. It was shown that every thing that exists must constantly receive its sustenance from God, and that everything must always perform certain definite activities to maintain its own form of existence. Even the rock must be always in tremendous activity within itself (molecular activity) in order to just continue to be a rock. Plant life, a step higher, must have its own higher type of activity to maintain its life. Animal life, another step higher, must maintain a still higher type of activity to maintain its life. So runs the law all through creation, each higher type of existence must perform a certain specific higher activity in order to maintain its existence. When we come to human life, we have a vastly higher type of life than animal life and the law holds here, as everywhere the higher form of life requires a higher form of activity to maintain itself. Man is spirit. His special, higher activity to maintain his own life, must be spiritual activity. Plant must feed itself from soil and air through roots and leaves. Animal must feed itself upon the organic foods it seeks and finds. Man, a spirit, must feed himself upon spirit food, or he will die as surely as would plant or animal. God is the source of spirit sustenance. Personal communication with Him is the only possible means of receiving that spiritual sustenance. That is prayer. Hence the necessity of prayer is for the men himself, the same as the necessity that the animal shall eat, or the plant receive its sustenance from soil and air. "The Why of Prayer," then is that prayer is the only possible means of the sustenance of the soul, which is the man himself.

Friends an Expensive Luxury.
Friends are an expensive luxury; and when a man's whole capital is invested in a calling and a mission in life, he cannot afford to keep them. The costliness of keeping friends does not lie in what one does for them, but in what one does out of consideration for them, refrains from doing. This means the crushing of many an intellectual germ.—Letter, Insen to Brandes, 1870.

Old Age Not Always Joyless.
Remember that some of the brightest drops in the chalice of life may still remain for us in old age. The last draught which a kind Providence gives us to drink, though near the bottom of the cup, may, as it is said of the draught of the Roman of old, have at the very bottom, instead of dregs, costly pearls.—Cardinal Newman.

First Christian King of Europe.
Lucius, a legendary king of Britain, is, by a Vatican manuscript, accorded the honor of being the first Christian king in Europe. Profane historians have failed to locate him. He asked Pope Eleutherius in 182 A. D. to baptize him. This was done and he went on a proselyting tour in France which ended in martyrdom.

Man's Debt to the World.
Idleness never won distinction in the world, and never will. The world does not owe us a living, but every man owes the world work. God made man for employment and we cannot dodge the issue.—The Road to Recognition.

Eliminating Danger From Fumes.
Fumes from chemical plants have been one source of many damage suits. Chemical engineers today are making many successful experiments which will ultimately lead to the elimination of all such fumes. Smelter fumes are being recovered and made into sulphuric acid.

WHIP-POOR-WILL

By ADDIE GRAVES

The last dainty piece of finery had been finished and carefully laid on the bed in the front room. The dressmaker's threads, rags and patterns and specks had been cleaned away, and the nerve-racking planning, fitting and hustling were over, releasing the tension of wearying weeks of confining toil. Rose had closed the door and gone down to the piazza for a breath of fresh air.

"What a relief," she sighed; "it will be so nice to have a few days of rest. All the other girls have been in a jungle of confusion up to the last minute. I think I will go over and call on Will's mother. It's fine to have a congenial mother-in-law—and Pa Plicker—as he already calls himself—is such a dear. It's like having two sweethearts, he is so considerate."

Rose walked slowly up the maple-shaded road until she came to a little white cottage behind some locust trees in full bloom. It was nearly dark, with a bay moon just disappearing behind Danked hill. How perfect everything was on a June evening, and what a lucky girl she was to be marrying the best boy that ever lived. As she turned up the path, bordered by a bed of perennials backed by shrubs and two small fir bushes, she thought she heard his voice. Glancing through an opening, she unmistakably saw Will's form—and a female figure with a hat on, tightly veiled. His voice continued:

"You are graceful enough to please an artist—and your pulse is perfect. We will fool them all—the nineties. You're a darling!"

His head was very near now, while he carefully buttoned her sweater. "I'll see you again in the morning, honey; don't be afraid of the dark." Rose did not stop to hear more, but fled in her silent-soled sneakers down the now lonely road. A lone whip-poorwill screamed from some nearby bush:

"Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will!"

"How absurd! Biddle heaped upon insult! Imagine ME whippings. Will! He can never be anything to me hereafter—and I am not the breach-of-promise kind of a girl! What a fool I have been to think a boy who has known me all his life could be in love with me! Of course he needed some new personality to interest him! I am like a sister."

Rose roared her exclamations by deciding to take the nine o'clock train to the next town to visit her sister.

While dressing Rose penned a short note to drop in the post office as she passed it on the way to the train. It was very simple:

"I have discovered that you prefer someone else. Goodbye. ROSE."

Will was packing his camera when the postman arrived. He was surprised to see his address in Rose's handwriting, for he had supposed she was at home but had not been up because she was busy and tired. After reading the note he pondered with wrinkled brow.

"Rose was as happy as usual just before supper; what COULD she have imagined so soon after?"

At last his face registered the solution of the problem. His mouth widened from his tight puckers. A convulsing laugh ended in a roll on the lawn. Quickly gathering himself up, he hurried into the house, put a picture into an envelope with a note as short as Rose's.

"Dear Rose: Come home on the 8 p. m. and be introduced to your rival. Yours, WILL."

The eight o'clock train brought a very disconcerted young lady to Milledell. Will met her at the station and tried to make the affair as little embarrassing as possible. They stopped to speak to Rose's mother, who was much astonished at her gulet return. As the couple continued up the road to Will's home Mrs. Moore remarked to herself:

"I didn't suppose they were so infatuated they couldn't stay apart two days! I don't believe they will ever quarrel."

Will led Rose from the path to the spot where she had viewed her terrible revelation of the night before. The graceful young lady was there, as tightly veiled as then. Will tipped his hat with great dignity.

"Allow me to introduce my charming senecrow. Isn't she the prettiest one you ever saw? She's gotten up over mother's dress form. She has certainly fooled all the many crows, robins and woodpeckers; they let my pens, beans, corn and cherries alone. But I played you a terrible trick, didn't I? What can you do to punish me?"

Suddenly a cry came from a maple close by that made Will and Rose jump into each other's arms. "Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will!" They both laughed and the whip-poorwill flew away.

ROADS STAND BY LOYAL EMPLOYEES

Tell President Harding Old and New Men Must Be Protected in Strike Settlement.

NOT A MATTER OF CHOICE

Faithful Employees Have Both Legal and Moral Rights to Seniority, and Other Benefits.

New York.—The keynote of the reply made by railroad executives representing more than 180 class-1 railroads of the United States to the proposition of President Harding, that "all strikers be returned to their work and their former positions with seniority and other rights unimpaired," lies in the last paragraph from their reply to the President as follows:

"It is submitted that the striking former employees cannot be given the service without doing violence to every principle of right and justice involved in this matter, and without the grossest breach of faith on the part of the railroads to the men at present in their service."

Under these circumstances, it becomes apparent that the railroads cannot consider any settlement of the present strike which does not provide protection for the loyal employees who remained in the service and to the new employees entering it."

The executives had accepted the first two conditions proposed by the President, namely, that both employers and employees accept the decisions of the labor board, and that all lawsuits growing out of the strike be withdrawn; and in relation to the third condition spoke not only as quoted above, but also as follows:

Agree With Harding.

"The railroad executives and managers agree entirely with the President's statement in his letter that 'it is wholly unthinkable that the railroad labor board can be made a useful agency of the government in maintaining industrial peace in the railway service unless employers and workers are both prompt and unquestioning in their acceptance of its decisions.'"

"Many men in the service refused to join the strike and in so doing were assured of the seniority rights accruing to them and of the permanence of their positions. On some important lines 50 per cent or more refused to join the strike. To these old loyal employees have been added thousands of new men who were employed and could be secured only upon a definite promise that their services would be retained regardless of the settlement of the strike, with all the rights and pertaining to such employment, including that of seniority under the working rules and regulations previously approved by the railroad labor board."

"Just the Opposite Effect."

"We especially point out that a refusal to the old men who remained in the service and to the new men who accepted service of the rights of seniority incident to their employment would have the opposite effect to that desired by the President, and would most seriously discredit the labor board."

"The board itself prescribed the rules of seniority under which the men referred to have secured their seniority rights, and the railroad companies have neither the legal nor moral right to deprive these men of those rights. By public utterances since the strike began the board has recognized and emphasized these rights, and to deny them now would, instead of upholding the authority of the labor board, overthrow its rules and discredit its authority."

"The chairman of the labor board at the time the strike was called made the following public statement:

"Upon one question the striking employees should not be deceived. Their leader has said that the strikers are no longer employees of the railroads and they have thus automatically abandoned all their heretofore and under the decisions of the board, including their seniority. This is not the board's action. It is their own."

"Many carriers are giving their former employees the opportunity to re-enter the service within a limited time. It must be understood that those who are now entering it will have rights of seniority that the board could not ignore."

What the Proposed Plan Means.

"It must be understood that any proposal that employees now on strike shall be permitted to return to the service, without impairment of their seniority, is merely another way of suggesting that those men who took employment in this crisis in good faith, relying on the promises of the railroads to protect them in their positions, these promises being justified by the authoritative utterances of the labor board and thus have made possible the continued operation of the railroads, shall now be sacrificed in favor of men now on strike, who not only brought about the crisis, but by their own action and declaration, are no longer employees of the railroads, under the jurisdiction of the United States railroad labor board, or subject to the application of the transportation act."

"In addition to the necessity of upholding the labor board, and maintaining the pledges made by the railroads to the men now at work, there is the practical effect on the supervisory officers of a violation of the pledges they were authorized to make. Their discouragement and demoralization would be far more disastrous than this or any other strike."

CENTRAL STATES FAIR AUG. 18-26

Big Agricultural and Amusement Exposition at New $500,000 Park.

TO GIVE $125,000 IN PRIZES

Agricultural, manufacturing and educational activities of the great Middle West, combined with the greatest amusements that money can secure, will make the first annual Central States Fair and Exposition at Exposition park, Aurora, Ill., August 18 to 26, inclusive, the biggest event of the kind in the Central West. The live stock and farm products exhibits will outdo those of any other fair in this section of the country.

A total of $125,000 in premiums, purses and attractions has been appropriated to supply recreation to more than 500,000 people who are expected to attend the fair, and to attract exhibitors in the various departments. The association, a corporation with more than 1,500 farmer stockholders, has invested more than half a million dollars in the grounds and buildings and the directors take pride in the fact that when the gates of the greatest fair grounds in the country are thrown open on August 18, opening day, there will not be a dollar of indebtedness on the part.

Competition Open to World.

Competition in all departments is open to the world and already live stock breeders, manufacturers and agricultural interests from almost every state in the Union have contracted for space. Every national and international stock breeder's association in the United States has added to the premium money offered by the fair, assuring the association of the greatest pure bred live stock exhibits in the history of the Middle West. Prizes in this department are greater than at most of the state fairs.

The Illinois university, state and national agricultural associations, the United States and Illinois departments of agriculture, and more than 40 county farm bureaus are co-operating to make the farm products department second to none in the world. Every product of the great American agricultural industry will be shown.

A Few Fair Facts.

An idea of the immensity of the exposition may be gained from the following facts concerning the fair:

One hundred and forty acres of land in fair grounds property.

Largest concrete and steel grandstand on any fair grounds in the United States, costing $100,000, and seating 10,000 persons, with additional seats for 5,000 in bleachers.

Thirty-five thousand square feet of exhibition space in Varied Industries building.

Thirty to fifty acres of Field exhibition space for farm machinery and implements.

Parking space for 7,000 automobiles. Forty-five thousand square feet of inside exhibition space for machinery.

Greatest tent in the world, 600 feet long and 188 feet wide, for an automobile show in which all models of practically every known make of car will be exhibited.

National Lumber Manufacturers' association $35,000 building, constructed entirely of logs from the north woods, for lumber exhibits.

U. S. Department of Forestry will have an exhibit.

U. S. Department of Agriculture will have an exhibit.

Swine pavilion will house 2,000 animals.

Cattle pavilion will house 1,100 animals.

Accommodation for 400 head of heavy draft and light harness horses. Tented city on grounds with accommodations for 2,000 people.

Immense buildings to house exhibits of agriculture, horticulture, fine arts, education and woman's work.

Canadian government will have an agricultural exhibit.

Great Western Circuit harness racing and International Motor Contest $130,000 track.

Midway with famous Johnny J. Jones shows, 35 attractions, daredevil balloon and airplane exhibitions, gorgeous night fireworks display and other great amusement features.

Guided by Electricity.

A French transatlantic steamship company was the first to experiment with the radiogoniometer invented by Bellini and Tosi. By means of this apparatus the direction of an invisible vessel, sailing along a coast and emitting wireless signals, can be determined from two stations on the shore and its course can be accurately mapped. Conversely, a vessel furnished with a radiogoniometer can determine its place near a coast by observing the directions of the waves coming from two wireless stations on the shore, and can thus make its way in a fog when the coast lights are invisible.

Usefulness First Requisite.

THE GREATEST

By AGNES G. BROGAN

The town of Byron had always been proud of its talent. Two noted authors and one famous singer came out of Byron.

It was proud of its continued Byron ancestry; here great-grandsons now lived in the same old stone houses of their fathers. So in conversation one might hear:

"Lucy is very like her grandmother at that age," or
"William will never be the man his grandfather was."

Again, Byron gave promise of sending to the world two gifted members. Everyone knew that Phyllis Benson would have a musical daughter. Phyllis herself had been their exhibit at the piano. Now the girl, grown to young womanhood, was going away to study.

"Not yet abroad," Phyllis' mother explained; "she will try first the best teachers in Boston."

Close following Phyllis, in time, was Mattie Mathers' daughter. Mattie's daughter Gwendolyn could sing beautifully. No church social or school entertainment was complete without Gwendolyn on the program.

"But," Mrs. Mathers explained, "we did not consider Gwen's voice seriously until the girl chie director of her college insisted that she have the best possible training. We are sending her in to the city to learn first from him."

Mrs. Benson and Mrs. Mathers basked in a fame—almost won.

Then came another gratification. Nancy Leslie's daughter, Linnet, evinced promise as a writer. Byronites recalled that Linnet had written more or less for various town publications. Her stories in the school magazine were commended; her poems recited from the school stage. But that a story of Linnet's had now actually appeared in a magazine gave certain proof of her calling. Already, in her mother's eyes, Linnet wore the laurels of the town's two famous authors.

"Now, how," asked Linnet, "do you ever suppose I happened to hit that editor just right?"

"There was no happening about it," her mother indignantly replied. "You have talent—like your Uncle Sidney. I shall send you to the city at once, where you may touch elbows with writers, and learn of them. Your Uncle Sidney is a newspaper man, and may be able to direct you."

"Oh, mother," said Linnet wistfully, "if you only knew how happy I am."

she smiled—"in poverty and obscurity, you would never send me away."

But Linnet went to the city, and after a time a paper came to Byron. It had a pretty little story, with Linnet Leslie's name beneath it. The newspaper was Uncle Sidney's.

When the three girls came home for a vacation week, they were feted and exhibited socially. Linnet was pale and thinner; her mother importantly explained that she had been working too hard at her profession. Soon after, the Byron paper reported that Miss Phyllis Benson would be obliged to discontinue for some time her musical studies. She had suffered a breakdown under the strain of wavy recitals.

Gwendolyn Mathers, unfortunately, had been called home because of her mother's frail health, and would not therefore take her anticipated journey abroad. So Byron was privileged to enjoy its own celebrities in recitals given at home. The new principal of Byron Hill school helped much in the inspiration of these entertainments. He was young, single and good looking. Moreover, he was said to be at work, in the seclusion of Byron, upon some wise treatise for publication. Then, suddenly and peacefully, Nancy Leslie died. It was difficult for the neighbors to realize the sad fact. Why, only yesterday she had read to them an encouraging letter from Linnet. Linnet, she said, had sent her twenty-five dollars. "She must make a good deal with her stories," the mother had said, "to spare me so much."

The girl was quiet and very brave when she was summoned home—they had expected that.

"You will go back to the city or course," they said.

"I am not going back," she told them gently, "because there is no use. I had no talent whatever in writing. Uncle Sidney tried to help me—all of them. It was not in me. I could not disappoint mother by telling her just then. I have been working in an office," added Linnet. She smiled apologetically, begging their pardon for falling.

"I never will be great in any way," she deplored.

From the shadows of the room a man came and took her hand. It was the school principal.

"Miss Leslie," he said, his kind eyes upon her, "greatness lies in character and strength—in truth. So you are great indeed this day. We are going to be friends, you and I," he added warmly.

And Linnet knew that this was to be true.

Few Like Him.

"The centenarian refuses to tell how he lived so long."

"He won't lay down any hard and fast rules about what to do and what to avoid."

"No. He says just because he's a hundred years old he's no longevity expert."

"We'll get his photograph, anyhow. He's a rare old bird."

Jane Austen's One Kiss.

There is not a single lovers' kiss in all Jane Austen's novels, says A. B. Walkley. One kiss, and only one, is mentioned in the letters; but that was only one a gentleman wanted to give, and there is no evidence that he bestowed it.

Fast Travelers in Air.

The swallows are very graceful birds and are exceedingly swift fliers. They feed on insects which they catch on the wing. There are five native swallows which are common—the cave or cliff, the barn, the bank, the tree swallow and the purple martin.

Only Real Education.

No education deserves the name unless it develops thought, unless it pierces down to the mysterious spirit principle of mind, and starts that late activity and growth.—Emerson.

Human Bones Once Charms.

Human bones used to be kept as amulets and charms, and the oldest known fetish was the thigh bone of a mammoth.

Prices, we are told, will be coming down for the next 25 years. Just like a woman putting on her hat when you are late for the theater.

Illinois Needs Police Protection for Rural Districts

By Frank Ridgway

The overflow of criminals from Chicago and other cities into the rural districts, where homes are robbed, cattle are poisoned, and barns are burned, has made the subject of state police a year round topic among Illinois farmers, bankers, and business men.

The state police has come to have a particular appeal to farmers since the program of road building has been started and the state of Illinois is being faced with surfaced boulevard-like highways that link up the cities and towns. Illinois' 12,800 miles of surfaced roads makes it possible for criminals to carry on their depredations at night in one part of the state and be hundreds of miles away by sun-up the next morning.

Corn cribs, granaries, cellars and smoke houses on the farms of Illinois are filled every year with more than a billion dollars worth of products. With the exception of an unloaded shot gun, an old toothless dog and possibly a ten cent lock on the cellar or hen house door, this agricultural fortune goes unprotected. Dozens of country homes, stores and banks in small towns and at cross road villages are robbed almost every week in Illinois, and comparatively few criminals are brought to trial for such offenses. There is no way of getting the exact total of the heavy loss that is caused by burglars in the rural communities. More roads and high power cars are being built and more burglars are being trained every year which means that there is no relief with the present system of catching rural thieves. About 4,300 miles of hard surfaced roads will be finished for the high speeding crooks to run over in this state by the end of the year.

Figures are not available to show the enormous fortunes that are gathered from the farmers here and there over the state every year. The Illinois Bankers association's report shows how rapidly money is being stolen. If protected money is so easy for burglars to get, then unprotected farm products must be an easy prey.

The bankers report shows that in 1919, 1920 and 1921 there were 197 burglaries, forty-one holdups, resulting in a loss of $1,612,000 or enough money to maintain a state police force of 425 men to patrol Illinois country roads for three years.

With no highway police protection in this state the speed maniacs are becoming a menace to farmers when they are on the roads hauling grain, live stock and other farm products to market. Even tourists are in danger of speeding cars that have little or nothing to fear so far as law enforcement is concerned. City men who own farms in the country make their visits less frequent every year because of the danger on Illinois unprotected roads.

States that have police organizations to patrol the country roads are: Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan, West Virginia, Colorado, Maryland, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Tennessee. Texas has the Texas rangers. Delaware, Nevada, Idaho, Washington and Arizona are in the process of organization. The state police question has been up before the state legislatures in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

Many farmers as well as business men and bankers have come to the conclusion that if a state police is n good thing for all of these states it would be a valuable thing to keep down rural crime in Illinois. Before fully analyzing the expense of operating a state police they throw their hands in the air when told that it costs about $7 a day for each policeman. They breathe more freely and are much surprised when told that the state police can be made a self supporting organization. According to Frank F. Barth, secretary of the state police committee of the Illinois chamber of commerce, Illinois could have a state police without increasing the state taxes one cent. Even if the expense had to be paid out of state funds collected from taxes it would only cost 5 cents for each $100 of taxable valuation for state purposes, and the city would pay about two-thirds and the farmers one-third, he said.

The Illinois state police problem would be quite similar to that of New York state where troopers started patrolling the roads in 1917. Last year New York's state police of 530 men cost $1,087,000, but the force more than paid for itself, collecting $250,000 for delinquent motor taxes, $300,000 in fines and $800,000 from the sale of alcohol extracted from seized liquor, a total of $1,350,000 or a surplus of $263,000.

'POP' GEERS WILL DRIVE AT AURORA

Grand Old Man of Racing at Central States Exposition.

Great Western Circuit horse racing, with some of the best known stablemen and fastest trotters and pacers in the United States, will be one of the big features at the Central States Fair and Exposition at Aurora, Ill., August 18 to 20. The purses will total $20,000.00 and the entry list will be the largest at any race meeting in the Central West.

Prominent among the many Grand Circuit stables which have been entered is that of "Pop" Geers, the grand old man of the harness racing world. He will have horses entered in nearly all of the races and on Tuesday will drive Sanario, 1:50 1/2, the champion free legged pacing gelding, in an attempt to break the Illinois track record of 2:03 1/2, made by Single G. at Danville in 1913. It will be Geers' first appearance on an Illinois track.

The new oval at the Central States Exposition plant has been completed at a cost of $180,000 and is one of the fastest in the country. In the big steel and concrete grand stand, erected at a cost of $100,000, there are seats for 10,330, with additional seats for 5,000 in the bleachers.

OLDEST FARMER IN U. S. HUNTED

Will Be Crowned Champion at Big Aurora Fair,
Aug. 18-26.

The oldest man and woman in the United States actively engaged in farm work will be the guests of the Central States Fair and Exposition at the big fair to be held at Aurora, Ill., August 18 to 20, inclusive. In addition to the free trip to the exposition, each will receive $50 in gold and farm implements of every description.

Under the rules of the contest the woman does not necessarily have to be the wife of the farmer, but she must be actively engaged in the work usually directed by the farm housewife. Names and addresses of the grand old men and women of the agricultural world should be sent to Clifford R. Trimble, secretary-manager, Central States Fair and Exposition association, Aurora, Ill. Entry blanks and rules governing the contest will be sent by return mail.

"We want to find the champion old farmer and farm housewife, bring them to the fair at our expense and give them a real vacation in addition to the prizes," says Mr. Trimble. "The Central States exposition is a farmers' fair and as such we desire to honor the pioneers in the farm industry. We believe that when the oldest tiller of the soil is found he will have a story of interest to every farmer in the United States."

"Mrs. Grundy."
"Mrs. Grundy" was the name of a lady in Thomas Morton's "Speed the Plow," a play written in 1793. Like Dickens' Mrs. Harris she was not a real character in the play, but everybody in the play who tried to do anything that was not proper was told that "Mrs. Grundy" wouldn't like it. The expression is generally used to mean the power of other people's ideas of what is right and proper to control our own actions.

Third Annual Horse Show

The horse show grounds at Lake Villa have been a place of continual activity for the past three weeks, with 25 workmen on the spot building a new addition to the grandstand which seats four hundred and ninety people more than last year, and with the new boxes which are at the north end of the show ring the total seating capacity with grandstands and boxes is over 1200. The size of the ring will allow that many more seats be built in future times if the crowds continue to increase each year. Last year's attendance was 3894 paid admissions on Saturday.

Special sanitation is being arranged for by P. R. Avery, plumbing contractor, and it is hoped to have running water and improved equipment in the rest rooms.

The Red Cross will have a special tent with attendants and with doctors on the grounds at all times.

The new entrance will accommodate cars and foot patrons at once and with the special parking system 1,000 cars can be parked within the grounds. This is ideal for the family to come for the day, for the ear-more, the moonlight 600 feet of dancing space and the most wonderful music, all for ten cents.

The admission to the Horse Show will be 50 cents, the lowest price charged for a horse show in America. The steeplechase will be a free attraction with eight of the country's greatest racers. We all know there is nothing more exciting and dangerous than a steeplechase. It is well termed the sport of the kings. No man, woman or child can afford to miss these races, at noon each day. The course is in plain view and the race can be seen every step of the way.

The Libertyville band will play both days for the ball games, horse show and give a concert in the evening from 7 o'clock until 9 o'clock when the Horse Show ball opens with a special exhibition ballet dance.

Last year people received pure bred dogs, pigs and other animals, this year a Ford car, pearl necklaces, dogs, pigs and a saddle pony will be given away to the lucky persons.

The association rather than to have their patrons at the mercy of the hot dog stands for food have taken it upon themselves and arranged a cafeteria lunch stand with home cooked foods at reasonable prices.

In the steeplechase are such entries as Abdel, the winner of the King's Plate, the famous race of Canada each year; Raval Flyer, one of the fastest steeplechase horses in this section of the country. Mr. Peabody's entry is a dark horse and one which may be expected to do the unexpected. Mr. Hertz's entry is an imported thoroughbred which is a noted winner. The O.

Ancient Olympic Games.

For the first 50 years from 770 to 725 B. C. the Olympic games were merely a 300-yard foot race. Then came the Pentathlon—running, jumping, wrestling, discus throwing and javelin throwing. Next was added the Pancration, a combination of boxing and wrestling. Later chariot races. Athletes were required to train ten months and spend one month before the contests at Olympia.

Entries for Horse Show Largest in History of Lake County

The Horse Show committee has found it necessary to greatly enlarge the stabling facilities because of the many entries of jumpers, hunters, saddle and harness horses for the Lake Villa Horse Show on August 11 and 12. Among the late entries are those of John R. Thompson, the famous restaurant man of Chicago. It is most gratifying to the committee to have him enter his newly imported thoroughbred, Leading Article, who has such a wonderful record, both in England and in America. It will be intensely interesting to see this star meet J. K. Dering's chestnut gelding, Edgmore Marvel, another famous imported English hackney. In this same class will also be entered O. W. Lehmann's now much talked of Field Marshall, the champion of England and of the last South Shore Horse Show. In this class then, will be three famous English and American winners fighting for honors. It is the first time these wonderful high stoppers have met since their arrival in America a year ago, and the outcome is anxiously awaited by all lovers of horses.

Those who attended the Lake Villa show last year can't forget the wonderful performance of the famous high jumper, Great Heart, who made a jump of 7'4". At the South Shore show in June he made 7'6", a colossal height for horse and rider. His owner, Mrs. Francis S. Peabody, is certain that he will better his record at Lake Villa.

B. L. Behr, Arcady Farms, Lake Forest, will again bring his wonderful string of high class jumpers and hunters. Mr. Behr was a heavy winner in the jumping class last year, and no doubt will carry off many ribbons this year.

A new entry this year, and one that the committee is exceptionally glad to have, is from Leonora Farms, Cary, Ill., the country place of Mrs. John Hertz. She is sending entries for all classes and her stables will make a most creditable showing. She has a very speedy horse to enter the steeplechase.

Virtue in Rising From Defeat.
There is something solid and doughty in the man that can rise from defeat, the stuff of which victories are made in due time, when we are able to choose our position better and the sun is at our back.—Lowell.

Loss Weight When Submerged.
Water has a buoyant effect. Any object weighs less in water than in air. The decreased weight is equal to the weight of the water displaced. When you get a chance, hold a rock under water and notice its heaviness; then lift it above the water and feel its increased weight.

Baseball Games to Be Big Attraction on Lake Villa Days

On the mornings of the Lake Villa Days and Horse Shows at 10:30, the strong Lake Villa base ball team will meet two of the strongest teams in and about this part of Illinois. Antioch will be the first to try and defeat our team, meeting them on Friday morning at the Sherwood park, which is one of the finest base ball diamonds in this locality. This game should be a very good one and of interest to all, for there has always existed a spirit of rivalry between these two towns situated so close to one another.

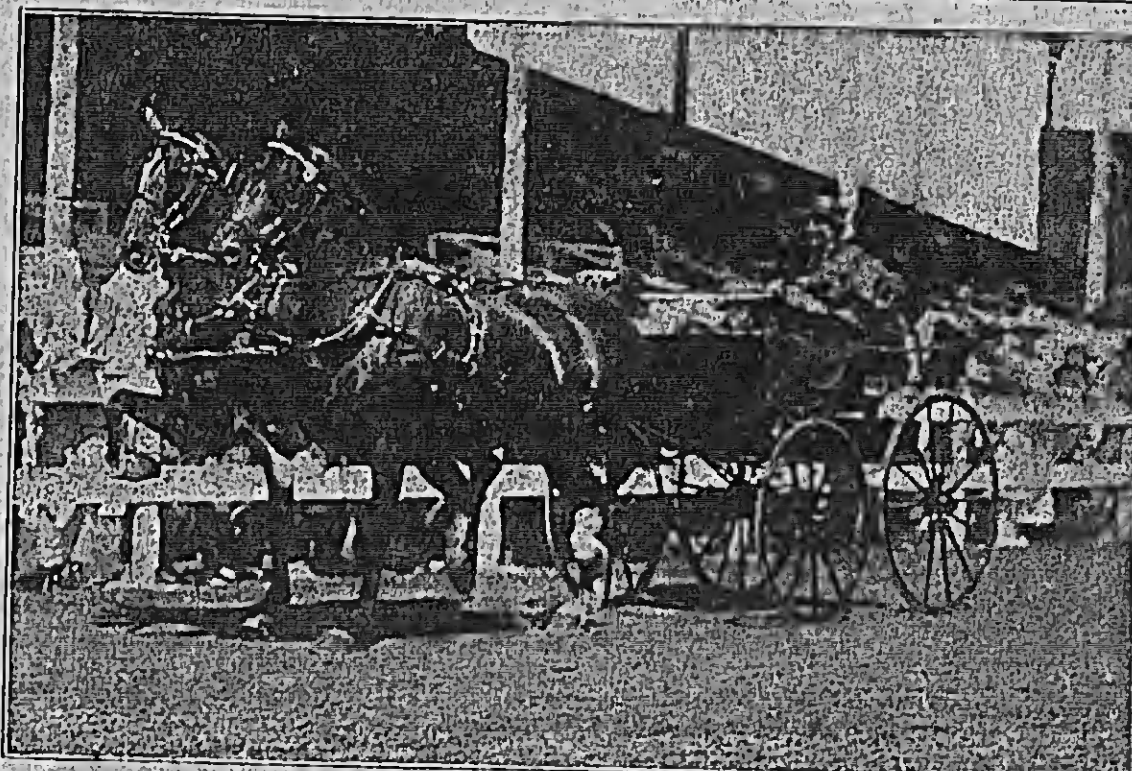

On Saturday morning the contest will be between the State Line team and Lake Villa. Lake Villa defeated these fighting sons of the border earlier in the season, but that is no reason why this game should not be a hot one, even to resembling one of those pitched battles of the early horse you will see performed at Sherwood park, on Lake Villa Days. You can't afford to miss these treats.

Remember the dates, August 11 and 12. Antioch vs. Lake Villa on Friday morning. State Line vs. Lake Villa on Saturday morning.

Origin of the Zulder Zee.

The Zulder Zee is a result of the bursting of the dykes. This happened in the Thirteenth century, and, in addition to Holland being cut in two, and Friesland being separated from the rest of the country by a large sheet of water, hundreds of villages were submerged and about 80,000 persons were drowned.

other. These two teams are very evenly matched as will be shown by the following resume of some of their games. Earlier in the season Antioch was defeated by a small score by the Grand Billiards, Burlington, Opeka Stars and Wilmot. Lake Villa has met and defeated the Grand Billiards, Wilmot, State Line, and Johnshurg. They were defeated by very small scores by the Opeka Stars and The Foresters of Waukegan. Last Sunday they met the Wilmot team, which they defeated earlier in the season and which has defeated Antioch, and lost to them. This you will see puts Antioch and Lake Villa in very close running order. Another very good reason that you should all be present to see this game, is that the Antioch team is out for blood in consequence of the small end of the score that they were handed by the Lake Villa team, when they met for their first game of the season on the Fourth of July. This game was hotly contested by both sides, and had many hair first. All these things and more, too,

Murat Brave, but a Coward.

Murat was a most singular character. He loved—many say adored—me. Order him to attack four or five thousand men in such a direction, it was done in a moment; but leave him to himself, he was an imbecile without judgment. I cannot conceive how so brave a man could be such a coward. He was nowhere brave except before the enemy. But take him into the cabinet, he was a poltroon without judgment or decision.—Napoleon.

Grave Question Unsettled.

Scientists have never satisfactorily accounted for the fact that when a man is puzzled he scratches his head.

NURSE AND PATIENT

By ROSE DAVIDSON

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The more Leon Ashley looked into the lights opposite the more like a grinning face they seemed, until the whole thing got on his nerves. He pressed his hands to his burning forehead. "Why did they move me out here?" he muttered.

One by one the white-garbed nurses rose from the benches where they had been sitting, all taking what they believed to be the last look at the strange man whose identity was still unknown to them, yet whom they had all learned to reverence. They were leaving him alone to stare out at the city lights, the city that belonged to his people and to him.

Once he had held himself erect at the thought of the royal blood he possessed, but now, somehow, after living close to his fellow-men in ditches and dugouts, he felt that he was going to share that pulsing life, that an ordered existence was going to make him what he had been, just a puppet of the people, who must act, year in and year out, as his royal family had done, and the nerves of his face ached with intolerable agony as he thought of the happiness within his reach, the love that might have been part of his life.

From the room opposite there came the faint strains of a song, which stopped altogether as the singer pushed the door open wide and crossed the balcony to where the stranger was sitting. "Come, come, is this the way you celebrate your release?" the little nurse exclaimed.

The man continued to gaze straight out before him—not at her, for he felt that if he looked at her all his fortitude would give way.

She drew a chair close to his. "I didn't mean to make light of your departure," she said softly.

And still the soldier sat, moodily and taciturn. He was handsome, as the men of the royal family had always been, with a bearing which caused men and women to follow him with their eyes.

The little nurse leaned closer to him. "There seems nothing to say except 'Good-by,'" she said softly.

Leon Ashley turned quickly. "Helen, I don't want to leave you," he exclaimed.

A flush suffused her face at his words. "Forgive me," he said. There was a sob in his throat as he spoke.

"For what?" she asked, and as she spoke she put her hand on his brown hair as a mother might have done. Her voice was infinitely sad and tender.

"Forgive you for caring?" she asked. "Oh, but you do not understand. This is the end for us."

She grew suddenly pale.

"I wanted you to love me," he continued. "but I knew that when I left here everything would be over for us. I knew I was a contemptible end to encourage your friendship, but as time passed I learned to care so much that I thought of nothing else."

"The little nurse looked into his eyes. 'I believe you,' she said slowly, 'and it makes me happy. Please do not pity me. I have known all along. I recognized you the first day when you were brought in so very ill.' She stopped suddenly and sat very still."

He reached his arms toward her, but she drew back.

"It's such a wonderful thing to live simply as I have done during this war," he went on finally; "such a wonderful thing to be loved for oneself alone. I can never really live again—it will be like acting a part in a play—rising in my father's kingdom, marrying one whom the family selects, no doubt, and always dreaming of you, Helen, and that life and love I might have had."

"Ah, don't," she cried, putting out her hand as though to ward off a blow. "Don't say it, don't even think it. sorrow is no new thing to me, though I am young, but I do not question it. I shall never regret having known and loved you." She paused a moment. "When there is some terrible thing in life to do, it is best to do it quickly. Good-by," she said, putting out her hand.

"I could not touch your hand. If I did, I could not let you go," she heard him saying softly.

The little nurse turned and left him, walking quickly along the narrow halls. The feeling of death was upon her. She hurried on to her room in the house opposite. She had given him her honest honesty always, she would give it to him until the end. He knew that she suffered, but she desired him to know as well that she was brave, that her spirit was unconquered, that she would do something rather than weakly suffer in ineffectual rebellion. She lighted a small candle, as she had done for many weeks and, holding it in the window, with her head held high, waved her good-by, and across the distance she had covered she knew their eyes met.

Taking Himself Seriously. "I understand you had a visitor yesterday."

"Yes," said Mr. Cobble. "He was a candidate for something or other."

"Didn't you find out what office he was seeking?"

"Well, he did say, but it kinder slipped my mind after he unloaded the floodgates of his eloquence. I gathered that if he wasn't elected the whole 'bloomin' country would go to wrack and ruin, but whether he was runnin' for President, the United States senate or constable of bent 13 is more than I can tell you."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Infallible Weather Signs. Symbol of Wedding Cake. The wedding cake, still cut by the bride, is one of the oldest marriage customs. ANNUAL FARMERS PICNIC

The Farmers' picnic this year will be held at Diamond Lake, August 15. The Farm Bureau and fair are co-operating in planning the picnic which we believe will be one of the biggest ever held in Lake county.

Ray Brothers at Diamond Lake gave a dance Friday evening, July 28, the proceeds from which will be used for prizes and incidental expenses at the picnic. If the attendance at the dance is any indication of the size of the picnic there will be some crowd.

The committee on amusements is planning a good time for both young and old. Games will be provided for the children and prizes for the winners. Pic eaters and three-legged races as well as those who can navigate in gunny sacks will have their round of fun.

The horseshoe contest will be played off in the forenoon, the winning team of members of the Farm Bureau, will represent our county bureau at the state tournament held at Olney, Ill., August 23. The tournament is one of the big events at the state picnic.

The Diamond Lake ball team has a game scheduled for the 15th and will be played at the diamond near the picnic grounds.

Three speakers are being secured. Miss Marjorie Sims from the university extension department will speak on Home Bureau work. This meeting will be in the dance pavilion and women in particular are invited to hear Miss Sims.

The program committee is trying to secure Mrs. Glover, editor of Hoards Dairyman, as one of the speakers through the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Music, games, speaking and a picnic dinner will make a real holiday for Lake county folks.

Who is Our Oldest Farmer.

The Central States Exposition at Aurora is putting on a contest to find the oldest man, also the oldest woman living on a farm in the United States.

Entries in this contest close at midnight, August 10, 1922. The fair and exposition will be held August 18 to 26, inclusive. Entries in this contest need not be man and wife.

Each of the winners will be given a free trip, with all expenses paid to and from the fair, also $50 in gold. They will also be presented with farm implements of various kinds which will be donated by different manufacturing companies.

Here are the rules of the contest: Entry need not own his own farm, but must actually live on the farm, direct its operation and the sale of its produce, and actually work on his place every day. "Gentlemen" farmers, employing managers, barred from contest. Entry must do general farming on a place of not less than 80 acres.

Entry in the farm woman's contest must have been living on a farm for not less than 20 years last past, and during that time and at present time, must be directing and actually performing fair part of the woman's work on a farm of not less than 80 acres.

Contestant must make affidavit that he or she comes within scope of the provisions of the contest, and must also have affidavits of two residents of the county to the same effect, sworn to before the town clerk of the township in which he or she resides or before notary public in town to which his or her mail is addressed.

All entries must be postmarked before midnight of August 10, 1922, and be mailed to Clifford R. Trimble, secretary, Central States Fair and exposition, Aurora, Ill.

Another Angle of Fertility Question

The statement is frequently made that crops growing in well fertilized soils will withstand drought better than those in soils not fertilized. This is not due entirely to the larger water holding capacity of the more productive soils; in truth, this factor may be of much less importance than the water-requirement of the crop. By water-requirement is meant the number of pounds of water taken up from the soil by a plant for each pound of dry matter produced in growth. The transpiration stream serves, among other functions, to carry the essential nutrient elements from the soil to the plant. It is logical to believe that with an abundant supply of available nutrients, the amount of water required to get them into the plant would be less than where the supply is meager. Experiment bears out this line of reasoning.

As early as 1850, Sir John Bennett Lawes carefully carried out experiments upon this question with the following results:

Crop No	Treatment	Water Requirement (In pounds per pound dry matter)
		Mineral	Complete Fertilizer
Wheat	247	222	206
Barley	158	256
Clover	269	229	148

The water requirement was thus reduced by fertilization from 1 per cent in barley to 45 per cent in the clover crop and, with one exception, was greater than 10 per cent in all cases.

Subsequently, no less than 26 investigators in France, Germany, Russia, England and the United States have carried out similar experiments, and all with the same results. The following quotation from Briggs and Shantz, based upon a detailed study of these investigations is of interest in this connection: Almost without exception, the experiments show a reduction in the water requirement, accompanying the use of fertilizers. In highly productive soils this reduction amounts to only a small percentage. In poor soils, the water requirement may be reduced one-half or even two-thirds by the addition of fertilizers. Often the high water requirement is due to the deficiency of a single plant food element. As the supply of such an element approaches exhaustion the rate of growth is greatly reduced, but no corresponding change occurs in the rate of transpiration. The result is inevitably a high water requirement.

The fundamental principle here involved, especially emphasizes the importance of soil treatment as a means of increasing in dry season.—E. E. DeTurk. Div. Soil. U. of I.

BARNYARD "GOLF" TITLE TOURNEY

Men and Women Will Compete at Aurora Fair.

A world's championship horseshoe tournament for both men and women will be one of the features of the program at the Central States Fair and Exposition at Aurora, Ill., August 18 to 26. It will be the first women's championship tournament in the history of the Middle West. Both title tournaments have been sanctioned by the National Horseshoe Pitchers' Association of the United States.

ADMISSION PRICES.

General admission tickets to Exposition park, Aurora, Ill., during the Central States Fair and Exposition, August 18 to 26, will cost 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children over eight and under fifteen years. In the evening the general admission will be 25 cents. The grandstand admission will be 50 cents, with an extra charge of 25 cents for those desiring boxes. A charge of 50 cents will be made automobiles and horse drawn vehicles for parking space.

Wedding Rings of Many Metals.

No standard regulation wedding ring has marked any age or century. All sorts of metals have been used. Roman rings were iron seal rings. Rings of gold and onyx without introduction of metal at all have been used in the near east. Silver wedding rings and white metal have had their day. Elaborate rings with profile photographs of the loving couple were favorite designs in the fourteenth century.

Not Original With Haynes.

The aphorism, "He serves his party best who serves his country best" is from the inaugural address of Rufus B. Haynes (1822-1893), as President of the United States, delivered March 5, 1877. In the famous transposition of Homer's Iliad, made by Alexander Pope (1688-1744), the English poet, there is this line: "He serves me most who serves his country best."

Fine Medieval Buildings.

There are many remains of Roman buildings in different parts of Europe. Their bricks are much smaller than ours, more like the modern tiles in shape. The workers in England called them (we have all heard of Wat Tyler) were probably brickmakers. Two fine examples of brick architecture in the England of medieval days are Hampton court and Lambeth palace, London.

Enjoyment in Chasing Knowledge.

Our remote forefathers chased knowledge, so to speak, through the heavens and over the earth on a hippogriff, and they doubtless wasted a good deal of time; but they enjoyed in the exhilaration, beyond any they could have got in chasing it down a rathole like a weasel.—Robert M. Gay.

Hop-Scotch Ancient Game.

Hopscotch is a game with a very long history. It is even said that some of the pavements of the ancient forum, in Rome, are marked with the same diagrams as those which boys and girls draw on the pavements in our streets today. So Julius Caesar and Nero and all the Roman emperors may possibly have played at that, too! Who knows?

Financial Outlook.

"Why do you object to children in the houses which you have to let?" "As a matter of kindness. People who are raising families can't be expected to pay the rent I require."

St. Ignatius' Church News

Regular Services

Holy Communion 8:00 A. M.
(Except 3d Sunday)
Church School 8:45 A. M.
Holy Eucharist 10:00 A. M.
(3d Sunday of month)

Last Sunday was not only the Eighth Sunday after Trinity, but it was the Feast of the Transfiguration of Our Lord. The latter feast in such a case takes precedence, and the day was celebrated as such.

The Early Eucharist is rapidly becoming more and more popular and the attendance increases every Sunday. It is true that it takes away from the later service to a certain extent, but it is a blessed privilege to have the Eucharist every Sunday. As the service is now at 8:00 instead of 7:00 as heretofore, it ought to be somewhat more convenient for the townspeople.

The later service is perhaps more convenient for the lake visitors, but they are most welcome at any of the services. Last Sunday the boys who were choir boys and acolytes turned out well, and it adds much to the dignity and solemnity of the service to have them. They are improving every Sunday.

During the Church School session last Sunday the hymns were played by Miss Flora Churchill of Libertyville, and it was a great pleasure to have her present. Music adds much to the Church School and what is most needed at the present time is a regular organist for the Church School. There is much better spirit when there is good music.

The sermon last Sunday was concerning the Transfiguration of Our Lord. He appeared on the mount as the Scripture says "and as he prayed the fashion of his countenance was altered and his raiment was white and glistening. And behold, there talked with him, two men, which were Moses and Elias." "And they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him." "While he thus spake, there came a cloud and overshadowed them; and they feared as they entered into the cloud. And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son, hear him." The Transfiguration of Christ was one of the two times on earth that Our Lord actually revealed Himself in his Divine Glory. It is the type of the beatific vision which we shall all behold of the Lamb sitting upon the throne at the last day. Faithful Christians will someday be delivered from the disquietude of this world and be permitted to behold the King in his beauty.

On Thursday of this week there is a meeting of the Ladies' Guild at the home of Mrs. W. H. Osmond and as this is the last meeting before the Bazaar, it is of the utmost importance. The Annual Bazaar will be held a week from this Wednesday, on August 16th, and everyone in any way interested is invited to attend.

Next Sunday is the Ninth Sunday after Trinity, and the services that day are Holy Communion at 8:00, Church School at 8:45, and Morning Prayer and Address at 10:00. Come and bring your friends to these services. There are plenty of people who have time for all the pleasures of this life, but who somehow never have time for worship of the Almighty and Eternal God on Sundays. Do not permit yourself to belong to this class. If we have no time for God, in this life, he will have little or no time for us in the world to come. There is no greater pleasure or satisfaction than worshipping God in His Holy Church, and no one is more conscious of this fact than those who willfully stay away.

Extinguishing Burning Oil.

An easy way to extinguish burning oil has been discovered by varnish factories, who use flame-washed wire net for this purpose. As soon as the net covers the burning surface, the iron wires conduct the heat so rapidly that the gas can no longer flame. This is the principle of the Davy safety lamp.

Important, if True.

The first flower seen by a bride on her wedding day must be white if she is to be happy. If her wedding wreath is uncovered by a veil she regrets at leisure, and if she forgets her bouquet and returns for it, misfortune follows. The girl who catches the bride's bouquet will be married within a year, while one who "rides on" either veil, or wreath, will die an old maid.

Cousins.

Cousin as a term of relationship means the children of brothers or sisters. Such children are first cousins to each other, or consanguine. The children of first cousins are to each other second cousins, and so on. The child of a first cousin is to the first cousin of his father or mother a first cousin once removed.

First Use of Khaki in Army. When volunteer troops were called for the Spanish-American war it was found that the heavy dark-blue uniform was too warm for service in the tropics. A service uniform of khaki cloth was therefore introduced. In 1902 the whole dress regulation of the army was changed.

What Is It Worth to Change a Tire?

On the road changing a tire is not an especially pleasant task.

The dust or mud, the grease and grime, the tedious delay—all are things we like to avoid.

But the time to think about these things is when you buy the tire—not after the blow-out occurs. For some tires blow out much more easily than others. Outward appearance counts for little.

It is the material in the tire and the construction of it that determines its strength.

Goodyear recognizes these facts and all Goodyear Tires are made of long staple cotton.

Take the 30 x 3 1/2 Cross Rib Clincher Tire here illustrated, for example.

It is made of Egyptian and Arizona cotton, the fibres of which average 1 1/4 inches long.

Many 30 x 3 1/2 clincher tires are made of short staple cotton from 1/2 inch to 1 1/4 inches long.

This means less strength and greater danger of blow-outs—more tire troubles.

Yet this high grade guaranteed Goodyear Tire costs only $10.95.

You can buy some tires for even less than this but none with the fine materials and construction of this one.

Can you afford to take a chance on more frequent tire troubles for the sake of the slightly lower price of cheaper tires?

G. O. P. TARIFF TO BE TRIMMED

Senate Leaders Agree to Cut the Schedules to Secure Passage.

INCREASED OPPOSITION CITED

Upper Chamber Will Accept House Plan to Speed Up Legislation and Get Measure "Over the Top" Before November.

Washington, Aug. 9.—In a concerted effort to insure the enactment of "protective" tariff legislation before November congressional elections, Republican leaders planned to abandon the high rates in the pending senate bill when it reaches conference and revert to the lower ones in the house measure.

Senator Smoot of Utah was among those convinced that the pending bill cannot become a law.

The increasing opposition to the senate bill has encountered within the Republican party alone has convinced some of the most influential Republican leaders of the upper chamber it probably would be better not to have a bill at all before November than to force the senate measure through to final passage.

While the pending bill will be passed by the senate under the present unanimous consent agreement restricting debate, probably within three weeks, it is expected to emerge from conference subsequently in a shape far more resembling the house bill than the one written by the Republican majority in control of the senate finance committee.

By going back to the house bill, Republican senators are of the opinion that an agreement can be reached between the tariff Republicans of the senate and house which will appease the wrath of Republican critics of the pending measure and at the same time satisfy those elements who want the party's tariff pledge fulfilled.

Two attempts made by Senator Harrison (Dem.) of Mississippi to get senate action on his resolution proposing an investigation of an alleged sugar syndicate were defeated on objections raised by Senator Smoot.

The syndicate, it was charged, was formed to raise a tax of $14,000,000 on the Cuban sugar crop for payment to American sugar growers in lieu of a high tariff rate.

The seven reeling groups, whom Smoot charged with being responsible for war among sugar producers, were listed as follows:

The American Sugar Refining company, W. J. McNichols Refining and Molasses company, the National Sugar Refining company, the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company, the Reverse Sugar Refining company, the Warner Sugar Refining company and the Independent Producers of the United States Refining company.

RUSSIAN CHURCHMEN TO DIE

Moscow Central Committee Denies Appeals of Leaders—Some to Serve Long Sentences.

Moscow, Aug. 9.—The central executive committee has denied the appeals of the Petrograd metropolitan, Benjamin, Archbishop Shinn, Professor Novitsky and Layman Kishnerov, who were sentenced to death for interfering with the seizure of church treasures.

"These men of the higher clergy who have carried on crimes against the state under cover of the church, and encouraged their followers to disregard the soviet decrees, must pay the penalty," reported the executive committee.

Death sentences brought against seven other clergymen who were tried simultaneously with the metropolitan were commuted to long terms of imprisonment.

WARNS POSTAL EMPLOYEES

Assistant Postmaster General Refers to "Propaganda or Misinformation" Now in Circulation.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Postal employees have been cautioned by Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett not to be misled by "propaganda or misinformation" designed, it was said, to create unrest among the nearly 600,000 workers of the service.

The caution contained in a statement made public was occasioned, it was said, by a declaration of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks that the postal service was not properly observing the eight-hour law as it was "cheaper financially to work regular clerks overtime than to employ substitutes."

New Yorker Saw Fearsome Possibility of Near Future and Gave Wife Due Warning.

Visitors to Central Park the other day saw a new angle of the family pet out for an airing, reports the New York correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch. A young woman was out with her variegated parrot. The bird stalked majestically about the lawn, but quickly came back and perched on the young woman's finger whenever she called. His eclogues and songs to and from the finger gave the parrot its prescribed exercise, whether it wanted it or not.

The young woman didn't seem to mind the crowd that gathered about to watch. In fact she seemed rather proud of the attention she and the bird were attracting. Jiggers, whose family pet is a dog, happened along with his wife and stopped to look.

"I suppose the next thing," he remarked to his wife, "will be that I'm to take the canary up to the park for a walk. Right here I announce the answer: 'Nothing doing!'"

Johnny Spilled the Beans.

Father's Sunday rest was interrupted by callers, and on receiving the message he exclaimed, "Oh, thunder-ton!" The callers arrived and the lady of the house greeted them with, "I'm so glad you came." But Johnny piped up with, "Yes, but papa ain't so glad." There were blushes to spare.

HOW BOOKS ARE DISINFECTED

Method Employed in France Is Said to Be the Most Successful Yet Devised.

The danger of contagion from books that have been in the hands of persons suffering from various diseases has led to the invention of methods of disinfecting, of which none appears to be more effective than that devised by a member of the municipal council of Paris.

This process consists of two features. In the first place, the books are placed in a "bater," where a strong current of air opens every leaf, and an aspirator sucks out the dust and deposits it in a disinfectant. The covers being bent back and held by clips, so that the leaves are widely opened, and placed over a heater, which for a long time subjects them to a temperature of 107 degrees Fahrenheit. The paper is not damaged, and the efficiency of the process is said to be well demonstrated.

HAD STUDIED HIS SUBJECT

Little Bobby's Essay Showed He Knew Practically All There Was to Know About Doors.

Little Bobby Jones was told to write an essay on "Doors," and the effort which he sent in was as follows:

"Most houses have all the doors that they need, and no house is complete without at least one. The two main differences between a door and a gate is: first, their opposite location; and second, that people have much less respect for a gate, and would rather kick it than knock on it. But a gate is more useful than a door because it does everything that a door can do, and, besides that, it can be climbed over, and often is."

"The door handle is a small but important part of the door which people never appreciate until it comes off. Most people never notice the door handle unless it is brought to their notice on account of having jam spread all over it."

"Doors are great things to give people privacy, and would give them still more if it wasn't for the keyholes."—Exchange.

No heat with this summer meal

A DISH of crisp, delicious Grape-Nuts, with cream or milk (some berries or fresh fruit, too, if you like) is cooling to serve, cooling to eat and cooling to digest—with a charm of flavor and goodness that rouses appetite enthusiasm. No preparation, no cooking—no heating of the body afterward, as heavy, starchy meals do—but well-rounded nourishment for every bodily need.

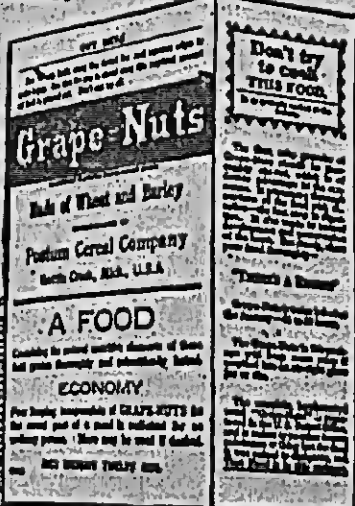

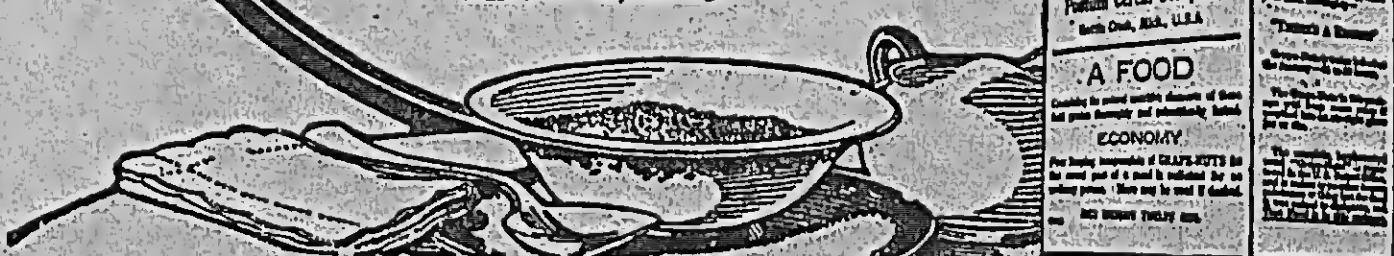

There's a noticeable feeling of lightness and comfort after such a meal.

Try this way out of the heat, bother and uncertainty that usually goes with the midsummer food problem.

Once the task of success gets you, there is born an eternal urge unsatisfied with inferior things. It compels success. The Rose Diamond.

One often hears of a rose diamond. The stone is not different in kind from any other diamond, the name "rose diamond" having relation only to the form or cutting of the stone. A rose diamond is one that has a flat bottom, and only the upper part of the stone being cut into facets or little faces and polished.

Bridal Superstitions.

No bride will ever make her own wedding cake, if she desires to avoid misfortune, but if she cuts the first slice, good fortune is assured. If a raveling is found on the bridegroom's suit, another girl loves him, while if his tie becomes awry, it is a sign that he loves another girl.

The Dark Day of 1780.

The "dark day" occurred May 19, 1780. It was so called on account of the remarkable darkness extending over all New England. In some places persons could not see to read common print in the open air. The darkness began about 10 o'clock in the morning and continued until the middle of the next night, but with difference of degree and duration in different places. The true cause of this phenomenon is not known.
